

County Profiles

The information included within this chapter is derived from the responses of the Transit Agency Survey and Social Services Survey. One hundred forty-two responses are summarized by county in the following pages.

A countywide assessment has been identified and is presented in the following text. Ten counties do not have transportation information provided due to no response from the agencies within the county. These counties are: Daniels County, Garfield County, Golden Valley County, Granite County, Hill County, Jefferson County, Meagher County, Petroleum County, Prairie County, and Rosebud County. The following pages provide a profile of each county, depicting each transportation provider, including transit agencies and social service agencies. The basic transportation data are provided from the Transit Agency Survey and Social Service Survey.

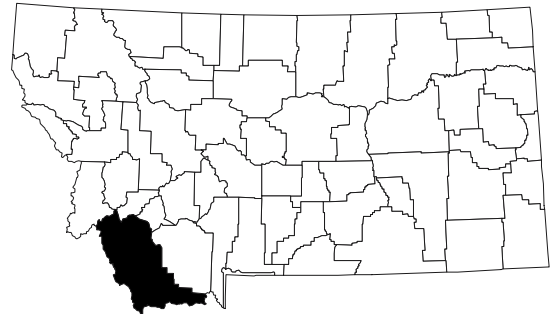

The data represent figures for calendar year 1999. Some agencies may have changed levels of service since that time, but the information provides the Montana Department of Transportation baseline data.

Beaverhead County

Among the largest counties in the nation, Beaverhead County boasts an area as large as Connecticut and Rhode Island combined, yet with a population number a mere 8,000. The county name comes from the Shoshone word for a rock formation shaped like a beaver's head on the Beaverhead River. Beaverhead County, located at the headwaters of the Missouri River, is situated in the hub of four ecological regions -- Northern Rocky Mountains, Central Rocky Mountains, Great Basin and Northern Short Grass Prairie. The Big Hole River runs through the county, which is where the state's sheep industry and some of its important cattle brands originated. The area is home to nineteen species of fish, eight amphibians, eleven reptiles, 274 birds, and 74 mammals.

Broadwater County

This county could have been named for the broad waters of the Missouri River, which backs up behind Canyon Ferry Dam to form the Canyon Ferry Reservoir, whose waters cut across much of the state. Instead, it is named for an earlier entrepreneur, Colonel C A Broadwater. The Canyon Ferry Lake begins at the northern edge of Townsend & is fed by the Missouri River. The Lake also serves as a critical feeding ground to support the bald eagle migration in the fall. The county seat is Townsend.

Cascade County

The cascade for which the county is named is the Great Falls of the Missouri River, which also gave rise to the name of its county seat, Great Falls—Montana's second largest city with a population of 55,125. Agriculture, livestock and defense are the industrial backbone of the city's economy. The city is also a major medical center. At the time of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, the area was occupied by the Blackfeet Nation.

Golden Valley County

Another late established county, Golden Valley came into existence in 1920, taken from parts of Musselshell County and Sweet Grass County. Its name was perhaps derived from a golden field of rye, but more likely it just sounded like a good name to attract settlers. There haven't been many settlers lately, as the county's population is approximately 1,100. The county seat is Ryegate.

Lake County

Not established until 1923, Lake County was one of the last Montana counties to be created. Its name is derived from Flathead Lake, the main feature of the north end of the county. Lake County is home to the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Nation. It is also home to the Mission Valley and Mission Mountain Range, the National Bison Range, Bob Marshall Wilderness. The county seat is Polson.

Sanders County

Sanders County, bordered on the west by the Idaho Panhandle, was named after Wilbur Fisk Sanders, native of Montana and former U.S. Senator. The county seat is Thompson Falls which is surrounded by millions of acres of National Forest and provides land for a variety of recreational activities, including camping, hunting, berry picking and wildlife viewing. The Clark Fork River also runs through the county, providing water for recreational activities.
